PURE GOLD

Gold is the world's yard stick for measuring values.

Nothing else is as good.

In a merchandise value certain articles similarly set a fixed value of quality and price.

They are limited—but imitation always lacks the merit of the value standard—the ring of pure gold.

Fight with the storekeeper whose taste runs to imitations.

TRIBUTE IS PAID TO DECEASED

Markers Unveiled on Battlefield Where Gens. Kearny and Stevens Were Killed.

PROGRAM AT PENDER, VA.,
BY VETERANS OF G. A. R.

Addresses by Col. Berkley and Mayor
Ball of Fairfax—Welcome by Former Confederate Officers.

In the presence of a large number of members of the G. A. R. markers were placed today on the battlefield of Chantilly in honor of two major generals of the Union army, Kearny and Stevens, who fell in that action.

The two markers to the memory of Gens. Kearny and Stevens were unveiled at 1 p.m. at Pender, Va., about half a mile from Ox Hill, where the two were killed.

Addresses of welcome were delivered by Mayor J. W. Ballard of Fairfax and Col. Edmund Berkley of the Virginia Regiment of the Confederate army. It was Col. Berkley who led the charge against Gen. Kearny more than fifty-three years ago when Kearny was killed.

Story of the Battle.

In the series of battles grouped under the heading of second Manassas or second Bull Run, in August of '62, efforts were made by Lee's army to turn the flank of the Union army and to overpower it between it and Washington.

The conclusion of this series was fought at Chantilly on the evening of September 30 in the midst of a violent rain and thunderstorm.

Maj. Gen. Phil Kearny of New Jersey, one of the ablest officers in the Union army, dashed out to reconnoiter and ran into a party of Confederates, who ordered him to surrender. He turned and dashed off, but was brought down by a fatal shot.

Maj. Gen. Isaac I. Stevens, in endeavoring to rearrange his lines, also was killed. Gen. Stevens was a graduate of West Point, and had been governor of Washington territory.

Capt. J. C. Smith, for record a deed conveying to the Phil Kearny Association about one-fourth of an acre of his farm on the field of Chantilly, where Maj. Gen. Kearny was killed.

Killing of Gen. Stevens Described.

Gen. Stevens' death at Chantilly is described in Todd's history of the 79th Highlanders, New York Volunteers, a Scotch-Irish regiment that served throughout the civil war. The account of Gen. Stevens' death was given by his son, Capt. Hazard Stevens, who was on his father's staff. Gen. Stevens had ordered an advance against the enemy, Gen. Kearny, in his account of the action, said:

"The first line, under the withering hail of bullets, was wavering and almost at a stand. Five color-bearers of the Highlanders had fallen in succession, and the colors again fell to the ground. Gen. Stevens, in his fury, pushed to the front, seized the fallen flag from the hands of the wounded color-bearer, unheeding his cry: 'For God's sake, general, don't take the colors; they'll shoot you if you do.' Gen. Stevens, with his old regiment, 'Highlanders,' my Highlanders, followed his general! rushed forward with the old flag. The regiment responded nobly, and the 25th Massachusetts imitated their example. They rushed forward, reached the edge of the wood, and hurled themselves with fury upon the fence and dashed it to the ground while the enemy broke and fled in disorder."

Falls Dead in Moment of Victory.

"Gen. Stevens fell dead in the moment of victory," he said, entering at the temple pierced the brain. He still firmly grasped the flag-staff, and the colors had fallen upon his head and shoulders."

The 79th Highlanders were represented at the G. A. R. encampment, just closing by Col. Andrew D. Baird. Two of the surviving officers of the regiment, members of the District Commandery of the Loyal Legion, Capt. Robert Armour and Crammond Kennedy, are residents of Washington.

Large Docket Containing Many Important Cases Awaits Attention of Justices.

The Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia will convene Monday for the fall term. Chief Justice Shepard and Justice Van Ordel have returned from vacation, and Justice Robb is expected to return from his vacation.

The justices will find awaiting them a docket of cases nearly as large as the one with which they began their labors last October. Thirteen cases of the total of 123 on the docket have been placed on the special calendar, which takes precedence for argument.

The regular calendar is composed of seventy-four cases, and there are thirty-six appeals from decisions of the commissioner of patents.

The first ten cases on the special calendar, which are ready for argument, have been assigned for argument Monday. As the court disposed of all cases heard last term, with one exception, it is not expected that any opinions will be rendered until November.

Among the cases to be argued Monday is the appeal of the District of Columbia from the decision of the Police Court in the excise case against the Metropolitan Club. The question involved is the right of the excise board to grant to the club a license to sell liquor in the residential section where not more than 50 per cent of the property is devoted to business. The club won in the lower court and the District appealed.

Good Demand Enables Vessels Quickly to Dispose of Cargoes.

Since the coming of cool weather the receipts of oysters have been good and the dealers report an unusually brisk demand. Vessels arriving here with three or four hundred bushels of oysters are able to dispose of their cargoes at prices ranging about 50 cents a bushel for good stock and get away inside of twenty-four hours.

This morning ten or twelve oyster-carrying craft were lying at the wharf market, and the dealers state that several oyster carriers are on their way from the Potomac oyster beds and are expected to reach here some time today. The oyster-tonging season on the Potomac opens in the middle of this month, and the vessels arriving after October 15 will bring full cargoes. Instead of the light ones they are now bringing. Oyster-shucking houses at the wharf are busy just now, and a fall-off in business is anticipated in the coming week, when the crowds leave the city.
